BRUTAL HUSBAND FINED.

Liquor Gets Peter Duscharme in Court for Beating His Wife.

Only one case was before the police court Thursday morning, that of Peter Duscharme of North Windham, charged with intoxication and assault on his wife Tuesday evening, July 10. He pleaded guilty to the first and not guilty to the second charge.

According to his wife's story, he came home at about 11:30 in an automobile. He was drunk and in a cross and ugly mood. She was up waiting for him and he struck her about the arms, head and body and she could show a mark on her arm where he hit her. He also called her vile names. She screamed and Mrs. Hall, a neighbor, came to the door. She went into Mrs. Hall's house and staid there all night, sleeping with Mrs. Hall's little girl, not waking up the next morning until Duscharme had left for work.

Mrs. Edna Hall, the next witness, said that she heard someone screaming and went to the door but could not distinguish any of the words. Duscharme told her that she had "better go home and mind her business" and she thought that she would. Mrs. Duscharme came into her home a little after 11:30 and stayed there all night.

Duscharme told an entirely different story. He said that as soon as they arrived in the automobile, his wife came out of the house, rolling up her sleeves and calling him and his companions vile names, threatening to "lick the whole crowd." She started screaming and went into Mrs. Hall's house. He called there a little later and asked Mrs. Hall if his wife was there. Upon receiving an affirmative reply, he left.

When asked if he had been in court before, he said that a fellow had once given him a ring and then forgotten about it. Later he saw it and claimed that he (Duscharme) stole it. He Principal Case May Return.

It has become known that the directors of school affairs of the city of Middletown have not as yet selected anyone to act as principal of the high school of that city and superintendent of the lower school. The business men of the city are trying to have W. A. Wheatley, the present incumbent, retained. The school board of Middletown held a special meeting Monday night for the purpose of taking action on the resignation of E. A. Case, principal of the local high school, who it was said was to take the position in Middletown. It is highly probable that Mr. Case will return to this city, as his salary was raised and on account of the agreement between the business men and the school board of Middletown.

Military Rule at South Coventry.

The residents of South Coventry are getting a taste of military rule, as men from the camp at the lake are being sent into the village to act as military police during the night. Wednesday night two men from Company L were in the village doing duty. The boys at the camp are faring well and are not complaining. Many friends of the men are contributing to their comfort by sending in things that will help them and bring in good things to eat. The men, with the exception of Company L, most of whom live in Willimantic, are required to have passes which let them out and back into camp.

Still Under Guard.

Private Keller of Company L, who stabbed a man while the company was stationed in this city, is still under guard, and it is probable that he will be sent into the village to act as military police during the night. The soldier who insulted one of the city officials in this city and created quite a disturbance will probably be tried at the same time.

Has Given $100.

The local circle has already forwarded $100 in cash to the national Red Cross organization for war relief work. Rev. William Keefe has divided the circle into groups and has organized them for active work.

The circle is now making comfort kits for the 35 young men enlisted in the service. The contents of these kits are as follows: Buttons, safety pins, pins, thread, vaseline, toothbrush, comb, mirror, shaving soap, absorbent cotton, adhesive plaster and other supplies useful to the military men.

Since 40 of these young men are members of the Holy Name society, the emblem of this order is being sewn on each kit. Father Keefe is urging that this be done in all three units over which he has jurisdiction in the interest of the religion and morality of the soldier. This is one of the practical features of the Holy Name work that Father Keefe intends to accomplish.

The estimate gives the total population of Connecticut as 1,178,623. A previous estimate by the government gave the state's population as 1,234,564. The new estimate, it is explained, is made on the nation-wide percentage of registrants to the estimated total population of the continental United States, exclusive of Alaska. The Connecticut council of defense contents this method to be unfair to this state, because the census of men from 21 to 30 years of age in this state is almost without exception employed in arms and munitions factories.

The revised figures on Connecticut's population give Bridgeport an estimate of 278,506 inhabitants. Hartford is 69,797, New Britain 76,542, New Haven 201,461, Stamford 47,747, Waterbury 169,120, and the balance of the state population enough to bring the total to 1,178,623.
